

BABB, MCKAY, PRUGH ON COMMISSION

OHIO CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS ARE DEFEATED

3 MILL LEVY WINS; ADAIR AND STOUT ON SCHOOL BOARD

PROPOSALS BURIED UNDER AVALANCHE OF OPPOSING BALLOTS

Term Extender Plan Repulsed By Heaviest Majority of All.

Columbus, Nov. 4.—Swept before an avalanche of opposing votes the three state constitutional amendments met crushing defeat at Tuesday's election, partially complete returns today showed. Returns from 7,669 precincts out of 8,650 give:

Debt limitation—Yes, 361,349; No, 395,816.

Classification—Yes, 349,685; No, 369,703.

Four year term—Yes, 265,226; No, 401,926.

Majorities against the amendments were even greater than political observers had anticipated.

Optimistic proponents of the classification measures—a bill that would have authorized taxation of intangible property at lower rates than the present rate on tangibles—had predicted the proposal would carry by at least 100,000.

The four year term amendment, branded a "term extender" and proposing four year terms for all state and county elective administrative offices, was defeated by more than two to one and political circles believe the final majority may exceed 250,000.

The debt limitations amendment proposing to write into the constitution the Griswold act provisions limiting the issuance of bonds of political subdivisions, went down to defeat by an overwhelming majority although there was no concerted fight against it.

Rejection of classification—perhaps the most bitter and outstanding issue of the election—marked the ninth victory for its opponents since 1889 and the third in the past six years. In 1919, a similar proposal was voted down and in 1922 it was defeated.

Contrary to expectations, large industrial centers polled thousands of votes against the amendment while in the rural sections where an opposing vote was expected, the amendment was favored.

Defeat of the proposal, political observers said they believed, was due to a deep-seated prejudice against abolishing the uniform tax rate.

Governor Donahay, the Democratic state committee, and the Ku Klux Klan were bitterly opposed to the proposal.

Defeat of the debt limitations amendment was considered of less importance. Its provisions are already law. Little hope had been held out for the success of the four year term amendment.

CLEVELAND TO SPEND MORE THAN 9 MILLION

Cleveland, O., Nov. 4.—Cleveland voters found today that they had authorized in Tuesday's election, the expenditure of $9,416,000 for major civic improvements in 1926.

The city issues approved by the voters included:

Bond issue of $2,000,000 for street improvements.

Authorized $7,000,000 bonds for street openings and widening streets.

Issue of $62,000 for hospital betterments.

Total of $680,000 for new correctional institutions.

TAMMANY WINS IN NEW YORK VOTING

New York, Nov. 4.—Tammany Hall swept New York City by an overwhelming margin in yesterday's election and State Senator James J. Walker is New York's mayor-elect.

With only a few of the city's 3,073 election districts yet unreported, Walker's plurality over Frank D. Watson, his Republican opponent, is 339,985 and probably will pass 400,000.

The Tiger machine also rolled up enormous pluralities for the city and county Democratic tickets.

AMERICAN ELECTORATE SPEAKS IN MANY STATES—KLAN ON SHORT END

Hooded Order Loses In Many Places—New York Acts
To Eliminate Grade Crossings—New Jersey
Names "Wet" Governor

After weeks of wrestling with issues ranging from prohibition and the Ku Klux Klan to the grade crossing evil and crime waves, the American electorate emerged in many states today from heated or year elections.

The greatest variety of issues, the largest vote and perhaps the most important results featured the elections in New York City and the Empire State. There apparently, the greatest step yet taken to eliminate the grade crossing evil has been voted by the people. With four thousand dangerous crossings, the citizens on the face of nearly complete returns, have authorized a loan of $300,000,000 to help wipe out immediately these intersections of death.

New York City gave Tammany Hall complete authority in the municipal government by electing James J. Walker, mayor, attaining a majority of the board of estimates and board of Aldermen, winning the five borough heads and electing its judicial candidates, as well as the entire city ticket.

After a hot "wet and dry" fight in New Jersey, A. Harry Moore, "wet" Democrat, was elected governor over State Senator Arthur Whitney "dry" Republican, thus continuing a state government of wet persuasion.

In several scattering localities the Ku Klux Klan issue entered the lists only to be whacked soundly on the head in a majority of cases by the voters. John W. Smith, Mayor of Detroit, was re-elected over Charles Bowles, Klan candidate, after sweeping several Klan strongholds.

Henry Ford was for Smith. Buffalo's mayor, Frank Schwab, Democrat, routed Ross Graves, who whether rightly or not, had been reported pro-Klan.

Louisville, Ky., went Republican after William R. Baker, the Democratic mayoralty nominee withdrew from the race two days ago when accused of Klan affiliations. Joseph T. O'Neil, hastily selected to succeed him, ran behind Arthur A. Will, Republican candidate.

In Binghamton, N. Y., Clark J. Cook, a Republican who was nominated by the Democrats to oppose Charles Yeomans, Republican with Klan support, was elected mayor. Binghamton is state headquarters of the Klan.

Indianapolis, however, gave victory to John L. Duvall, the Klan candidate for mayor over Walter Myers, Democrat.

The usual crop of interesting results came out of the elections. Boston elected a Republican mayor, Malcolm E. Nichols, for the first time in eighteen years, when the Democratic vote was hopelessly split among seven candidates.

New York city elected its first woman alderman Mrs. John T. Pratt, of the so-called "Silk Stocking district."

In Pittsburgh Honus Wagner, one time Pirate shortstop of undying fame was beaten for sheriff on the Democratic ticket.

Philadelphia elected a dead man for District Attorney. John M. Patterson, Republican candidate died during the night and stickers which would have elected a successor, when Patterson's condition was found to be critical yesterday, failed to stem the tide of votes to the dying man.

Cambridge, Mass., drew precedent to the winds and re-elected Edward W. Quinn, its mayor, for his fifth term of 2 years.

Syracuse, N. Y., elected a Republican mayor for the first time in four years. In Rochester, N. Y., mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt, was elected after being refused the nomination by the city's Republican machine.

Kansas City returned a Republican mayor in the person of Albert Beach.

Victory appears to have crowned four constitutional amendments advocated by Gov. Smith in New York—providing $100,000,000 for improvement of public buildings, $300,000,000 for elimination of dangerous grade crossings, for re-organization of state departments and for re-writing important sections of the judiciary of the state constitution.

FOUR KENTUCKIANS DEAD IN VOTING TOLL

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4.—Four Kentuckians were killed in quarrels last night, according to reports here today.

William Gilbert and a man named Maples, was said to have engaged in a duel at Highspilitt, 18 miles north of Harlan, and fatally wounded each other. They quarreled over the municipal election reports it is said.

One man was slain and four wounded in an election fight at Bastin Station, near Whitesburg. No names were obtained. The local election was given as the cause of the shooting.

Robert Cole, Poorfork, was shot and killed by Robert Davidson, Linfork, near Harlan in an election fight, reports said.

BROKER, DAUGHTER WILL RECOVER FROM WOUNDS INFLICTED

Shirley Wing, Banker of Columbus, Thought to Be Insane

Columbus, Nov. 4.—Shirley Wing, son of a Columbus banker, who committed suicide last night after shooting and wounding his wife, Marjorie Meeker Wing, nationally known poetess and his father-in-law, Claude Meeker, Columbus broker and politician, was seized by a temporary fit of insanity, authorities said today they believed.

Wing became estranged from his wife three months ago when she refused to give up her literary career. He had been going to the Wing residence to visit his 17-months old daughter and made one of his calls last night. An argument ensued, according to the story told to police, in which Wing told his wife he had come to kill her. Meeker, who had called to take his daughter to the theater, heard the argument and came to her assistance.

The broker was met by two shots as he approached the room where the argument was taking place. Three other shots followed in rapid succession, one wounding Mrs. Wing, another going wild and a third killing Wing.

Meeker has been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate for United States senator.

Wing was trust officer at the First National Bank here, of which his father is president. Meeker was shot through the right side below the hip. His daughter was wounded in her left leg.

Neither of the wounds are serious, according to physicians.

The broker's wife said her daughter left Wing because he objected to her literary pursuits. Meeker said he went to his daughter's home for dinner, the theater party to follow.

"When I went into the house, I found Wing had locked my daughter into an upstairs room," he said.

"I saw he had a revolver in his hand. I asked him to let me in the room—that I wanted to talk to Marjorie. I had heard them arguing and believed she needed help."

"I came to kill her," he told me.

"He then barred the door and ran to a casement window just above the stairs and shot at me. He next shot Marjorie and then turned the gun on himself."

"As the bullet hit me I staggered to the door to warn my wife."

Here Mrs. Meeker took up the story.

"I heard shots," she said. "But I believed doors were being slammed and paid no attention to them."

"The first I knew of the tragedy was when my husband staggered through the door, crying that he had been shot and Marjorie was killed."

Mrs. Meeker then told of the domestic trouble that led to the separation of the Wings.

Majorie, of course, is all wrapped up in her literary work. She has been writing articles and composing poems for many national and international magazines.

PAULDING SLOW

Columbus, O., Nov. 4.—Paulding was the only county in Ohio, that Tuesday night, did not make any election report to the Secretary of State.

BRYSON, HASTINGS AND FISHER SUCCESSFUL FOR SCHOOL BOARD IN COUNTY

Amendments Defeated—Graham Bryson, Hedges and Grant On Township Trustees—Jones Re-Elected Justice Of Peace

Administration candidates for city commission, incumbents seeking re-election for Xenia Township trustees and county board of education were successful in Tuesday's voting while Xenia city also passed a three mill levy for school purposes and an amendment to the city charter granting the mayor judicial powers.

At the same time two members of the city board of education were selected, in addition to a township clerk, justice of the peace and constable. Meanwhile the entire county rolled up a big majority against the three proposed state amendments.

City Commission incumbents scored decisive victories, unofficial figures show.

Karl R. Babb, independent, polled the highest vote, 1,381. S. M. McKay and John W. Prugh, incumbents, were the other successful candidates. Prugh was given a plurality of more than 200 votes over J. D. Cowan, who ran fourth. The vote: Babb, 1,381; McKay, 1,288; Prugh, 1,014; Cowan, 779; Alexander, 714; Russell, 561.

Substantial majorities were rolled up over the county in opposition to the three proposed amendments to the state constitution with unofficial returns from forty-two out of forty-seven precincts.

The vote: Debt limitation, Yes, 1,941; No, 2,925; Classification, Yes, 1,784; No, 2,850; Term extender, Yes, 1,260; No, 3,086.

The Xenia City School District extra tax levy for five years carried by a vote of four to one. The vote was: Yes, 1,835; No, 464.

Proposed amendment to the city charter to provide for a mayor's court as a solution of the Municipal Court tangle, received a favorable vote of three to one. The amendment will automatically abolish the police court and give the mayor judicial power. The vote was: Yes, 1,524; No, 503.

James D. Adair and J. J. Stout were successful candidates for two vacancies on the city board of education. Each received decisive majorities over Mrs. J. H. Benbow, who ran third. The two vacancies were created by retirement of Jacob Kany and Harry D. Smith. The vote on fourteen precincts was: Adair, 1,556; Benbow, 814; Stout, 1,296.

Graham Bryson, J. W. Hedges and Ward Grant, won re-election on the Xenia Township board of trustees, after a bitter contest in which Harry Seifert, independent candidate, was nosed out after voting in the last precinct had been tabulated, according to unofficial figures.

Bryson received the highest vote with 1,307 followed closely by Grant with 1,190 and Hedges with 1,149. Seifert ran a close fourth by polling a vote of 1,090 with James I. Patterson in fifth position with 958. Joseph Gatrell received 595 and Clarence Riley, 296.

W. B. Bryson, J. E. Hastings and A. E. Fisher, incumbents, won re-election to the county education board. Bryson was accorded the biggest vote polling 1,686 while the support of Hastings and Fisher measured 1,625 and 1,414 respectively. Other votes: Conklin, 1,110; Smith, 1,000; and Noggle, 797. The result is based on unofficial tabulation of votes received from twenty-six of twenty-nine precincts.

George McKee was elected Xenia Township clerk, receiving a plurality of nearly 400 votes over J. H. McPherson, the only opposing candidate. The vote was: McKee 1,202; and McPherson 818.

J. E. Jones was successful in his campaign for re-election as justice of the peace in Xenia Township by a majority of 300 votes over A. C. Garwood, only rival. Jones polled 1,416 votes while Garwood got 1,131. Ed Wilkins was unopposed for re-election as constable.

The vote throughout the county was not exceptionally heavy but was considered normal for municipal elections by officials of the election board. No estimate of the total vote was available Wednesday.

Enthusiasm which characterized municipal elections of other years was noticeably absent this year. Spirited races for the most part, were lacking, although the campaign was enlivened by the injection of alleged Klan candidates into several races.

CINCINNATI NAMES SIX CITY CHARTER TICKET CANDIDATES

Indicates Crushing Defeat
Of Hynicka Organization

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—Six of the nine city charter ticket candidates seemed certain of election when counting of first choice ballots cast Tuesday was suspended by the board of elections today.

If this prospect is realized, the outcome will represent a crushing defeat for the Hynicka republican organization which has controlled city government in Cincinnati almost uninterruptedly for twenty years.

Counting of ballots suspended to afford rest for exhausted workers will be resumed at 3 p. m.

Meanwhile unopened ballots remained under guard of police and watchers designated by Republican and Democratic organizations.

The election was the first made under Cincinnati's City Manager charter adopted last November. Thirty nine candidates were in the race for the nine council seats to be filled.

"The Hynicka organization adopted the strategem of endorsing six candidates for the nine seats, hoping to obtain a majority in the council and name the new city manager. The city charter committee which won the charter victory last year, named nine candidates.

Counting of first choice ballots cast Tuesday was suspended by the board of elections today.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—Indications today were that John M. Purcell, state treasurer, had defeated by a small majority John D. Bassett, wealthy furniture manufacturer, after a campaign in which the former's denominational affiliation had caused considerable bitterness.

Purcell is a Catholic. He ran far behind the other candidates on the Democratic ticket.

Harry Flood Byrd, brother of Lieut. Commander R. E. Byrd, Jr., who was with the MacMillan expedition, was elected governor by a majority of from 60,000 to 75,000 over S. Harris Hoge, Republican nominee.

Correct weight can be yours

I DO NOT want to be thin! I just want these hollows filled out. I just want enough firm, plump flesh on my bones to fill out my figure.

Of course you do. You want a figure that you can drape your clothes on—not just hang them on! What's the use of having pretty clothes, if they just hang on you?

And what would you say if you were told you could have the figure you want? A graceful, well rounded body—firm, solid flesh—just enough—just your right weight? You'd be mighty happy, wouldn't you?

Well, then, be happy—because you can have it! Put plenty of red cells in your blood and watch your weight go up to where you want it! That's what's the matter with you! Your blood is impoverished. You need more rich, red blood. S. S. S. is the thing to put red blood in your system. S. S. S. helps Nature build red blood cells by the millions.

You just try S. S. S. and watch how quickly you begin to fill out your clothes. Notice your skin clear of unsightly blemishes—your appetite increase—strength come to flabby muscles and vim and vigor fill your whole system. It's red blood that does it. And S. S. S. surely helps Nature build that red blood.

S. S. S. is sold by all drug stores. The larger bottle is more economical.

S.S.S.

I hope to tell you!

VOCATIONAL WORK NEEDED IN SCHOOLS KIWANIANS LEARN

Talk by Fred R. Keeler, instructor in the vocational training and agricultural department at Central High School featured the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Goody Shoppe Tuesday night.

According to Mr. Keeler, vocational training work at the high school is divided into three classes: needs of the form of training in the school, acts providing for it, and work which has been done in the department.

Statistics show vocational training is needed in the Xenia schools, the speaker said. He pointed out that the farmer today must be a botanist, chemist, physicist, zoologist, executive, mechanic, laborer and veterinarian.

Three men out of every four are engaged in industry rather than agriculture, he declared. He quoted figures showing that of ten million boys in the United States, approximately three million are engaged in agricultural pursuits.

More than 138 farms change hands in Greene County every year, he said. Of this number 110 of the farmer come from outside the county while twenty-eight are natives of the county.

He analyzed the work being done in the vocational department at Central High School. Mr. Keeler has tested 60,000 ears of corn in five years, and the advantage of tested corn is that the average yield is five bushels more per acre, he said.

The department is now working on a small orchard and has purchased a small incubator. He said the farmers' institute last year had helped boys to build up flocks of chickens, dairy herds and any continuation project they could find.

Kiwanians were shown the new orthographic talking machine recently perfected by the Victor Company by James Adair. A special talk upon Red Cross activities was delivered by the Rev. W. H. Thiford.

Attendance prize was won by W. R. Torrence.

An interesting, and at the same time picturesque and colorful description of a pioneer marriage of a century or more ago, was delivered by Dr. W. A. Galloway. Details of the wedding were given, the speaker explaining how the bride and groom danced from afternoon until morning; how they were placed in the loft of the log cabin after the ceremony, and were brought down from time to time to receive a drink from a bottle of hops called "Black Betty." On these occasions the dancing would stop and the couple was toasted, he said.

AN APOLOGY

An editorial in this column yesterday referred to the Middletown Journal, an affiliated newspaper of the syndicate of which The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican are members.

Copy for these papers, are prepared in the editorial rooms of the several newspapers and syndicated to each on an exchange basis. It was thus that an editorial intended in the Middletown Journal was published in this paper. Its substitution in copy for this paper instead of for the Middletown Journal was the result of confusion in the interchange of material.

CRIME, WASTE AND LUXURY.

PEOPLE are still complaining about the high cost of living and not without cause. But after all, our living bill is only 24 1/2 per cent. of our total income, while we pay out 44 1/2 per cent. of our total income for waste, luxury and crime.

The American Educational Digest is authority for the statement that crime, waste and luxury consume $30,975,000,000 or 44 1/2 per cent. of the yearly national and personal incomes of Americans.

Crime, according to this authority, consumes $5,775,000,000, or 8 1/2 per cent. of the total income; waste, $9,800,000,000, or 14 per cent., and luxury $15,400,000,000, or 22 per cent. of the whole. We do not know exactly all of the factors included in the item of luxury, but we presume the term is broad enough to include everything that might be considered as wholesome or unwholesome luxury. This item, no doubt, is very debatable, but surely there ought to be very little, if any, debate about waste and certainly none at all about crime.

Now, compare these expenditures and percentages with some others. For example: The church, which involves all religious enterprises and consumes $525,000,000 a year, or three-quarters of 1 per cent. of our aggregate national and personal incomes; education, $1,050,000,000, or 1 1/2 per cent.; government, $10,500,000,000, or 15 per cent. When Mr. Coolidge completes his campaign of economy, these figures will be doubtless, much reduced. Living consumes $17,150,000,000, or 24 1/2 per cent.; the peoples saving's, $7,700,000,000, or 11 per cent.; and miscellaneous, the balance of $2,100,000,000.

There is at least a good deal of food for thought in these statistics. People who waste 14 per cent. of their income, or spend 22 per cent. of it for luxuries, while devoting less than 1 per cent. for religious activities and less than 2 per cent. for education, are surely not placing the emphasis of their lives on those things which count most in the making of character, personal or national. But, discouraging as is this aspect of the case, what are we going to say for character when we tolerate the expenditure of 8 1/2 per cent. of all we make for crime, for that which undermines character and saps the life-blood of the nation?

The statistician might differentiate between waste, and criminal waste, for the proceeds of crime surely is waste.

CRIME PREVENTION.

IT IS an old saying that if you would reform a child, it is necessary to begin with his grandfather. This may be placing more than the warranted premium on heredity. But the problem of instructing in obedience to the regulations of society has been greatly emphasized by the prevalence of crimes of all kinds, a large percentage of which are committed by persons who are between the ages of 18 and 25 years.

The training of children cannot be left entirely to the public schools, as so many parents show a disposition to do, but the obligation rests upon the parents and society in general. Teachers may enjoy their pupils to obedience and may set them a good example of citizenship, but 30 hours a week, nine months in the year, will not offset bad influences from other sources. If boys and girls are to be saved from careers of lawlessness, there must be greater co-operation between the authorities and parents, especially in the cases of children who show a disposition to disregard the regulations which have been provided for the good of themselves and others.

One of the principal causes of crime is the freedom that is given to many boys and girls to roam the streets until late hours. The curfew plan has been tried by many municipal authorities, but it has not been found effective because many parents will not co-operate in the efforts to keep children from the streets. Juvenile courts have been established and accomplish much good in handling cases of delinquents. But the most important work is in preventing boys and girls from reaching the stage in disobedience which makes it necessary to take them into court.

Just Folks

BY EDWARD A. GUEST

TWO ENTHUSIASTS MEET
A golfer met a fisherman along a shady walk.
And joining him for company he started in to talk:
"I almost made a hole in one," the golfer said with glee.
"My ball went in the cup and out as pretty as could be."

The fisherman replied in kind: "Last week upon the bay
I hooked a five-pound small-mouthed bass, but, oh, he got away!
He rose a dozen times or more; I can't describe the thrill.
And then at last he snapped my line, as big ones sometimes will."

The golfer said: "On number three I made a niblick shot.
My ball was buried in a trap, but still the 'four' I got;
I took about a peck of sand; and never raised my head.
And when I got up to the green my ball was 'stony dead.'"

"While out for perch the other day," the fisherman replied,
I had an ordinary line on which three hooks were tied.
I'd only common worms for bait, but this is truth I tell,
I caught three perch with every cast. I'd call that biting well."

"I'm sorry," said the golfer, "but I turn at yonder street."
"All right," the fisherman replied, "I'm glad we chanced to meet."
Then each one muttered to himself: "I couldn't stand it more.
It's torture when you have to be companion to a bore."

THE KISS HEARD ROUND THE WORLD

1905-Twenty Years Ago-1925

The Xenia Shoe Manufacturing Company has just bought the real estate and machinery of the Buckeye Shoe Manufacturing Company which ceased business some time ago.

Central High School's football eleven was overwhelmingly defeated by Springfield High at Springfield by a score of 75 to 0.

"The Sign of the Cross," produced at the Xenia Opera House Saturday night was one of the best attractions that has visited this city this year.

Vice-President Charles W. Fairbanks was a visitor in Xenia for a couple of hours Monday night. He was on his way to Indianapolis to cast his vote.

Instant Beauty
Gleamy, Thick, Wavy
Hair in a Moment

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair, and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Today's Talks

"TAKE ME ALONG."

One day Wendell Phillips met Nora Perry, a very talented poetess, on the streets of Boston.

Greetings over, for they were long acquaintances, Phillips asked her where she was going. "To see a friend," she replied.

"Ah," said Phillips, "you remind me of the Frenchman who received the same answer, and said, 'Take me along! I never saw one!'"

I wish that I might have been at that reported meeting, too, so that I might have said likewise: "Take me along."

Sometimes we think of friendships as formed. They aren't. They grow. And it takes so long to grow them. And life is so short. I am half through life and have only a little handful grown. Maybe just one or two—in the pinches.

No altar was ever erected half so sacred as that erected to friendship. To misjudge or to betray your friend is something that no law could ever adequately punish.

Not long ago I wrote a little Talk along this line and a man whom I have known for twenty years, wrote me from his distance of over 1,000 miles and said he hoped he was one of my "little handful." He assuredly is. I had him in mind when I wrote as I did.

The best friend I ever had was my mother. She thrills me with love for her every time I think of her. She never censured me. She understood. That's what a friend does. It's a more tremendous job for a friend to understand that it would be to build 16 Brooklyn bridges—yet a friend does this job easily and happily. The point is that for a friend to understand is inbred—just like it is inbred in the diamond to glitter and glorify natural beauty.

There is so much life that isn't plain at all. The next time I hear someone say that he is going to see a friend, I am going to reply: "Please take me along. I want another!"

CHARGES TO FOLLOW ALLEGED BATTLE OF OSBORN OFFICIALS

Marshal Schneider May Face Action After Election Trouble

Charges of resisting an officer and assault and battery may be filed against William Schneider, veteran Osborn marshal, following a fight said to have taken place between Schneider and Sydney Cornelius, Bath Township constable, in Osborn Tuesday night.

Prosecutor J. C. Marshall admitted Wednesday afternoon he is prepared to file the affidavits against Schneider for signing by Cornelius as the prosecuting witness. In the meantime Schneider, who was arrested by Cornelius after the trouble, was released on his own recognizance by Sheriff Morris Sharp and is at his home.

Cornelius told authorities he was attempting to arrest two men in Osborn who are said to have had a quart of whiskey when Marshal Schneider, he alleges, interfered. During the altercation Cornelius struck Schneider in the mouth with his pistol, splitting his lip and knocking him unconscious.

The injury was dressed by a physician and Cornelius then brought Schneider here at 1 a.m. Wednesday and turned him over to county authorities. Schneider was released for appearance in court Wednesday morning but relatives called the sheriff's office and said his condition would not permit of his appearing. Hearing was therefore continued pending recovery and the preparation of the affidavits.

Trouble is said to have been inspired by the fact that both were candidates for the joint position of marshal of the village and constable of Bath Twp., and that Schneider was successful at the polls Tuesday. If the charges are filed by Cornelius, Schneider will be arraigned before R. O. Copey, justice of the peace.

Authorities are searching for the two men Cornelius was attempting to arrest.

HIS HOBBY CARRIED HIM TO FAME

How William Francis Gibbs Rode His Boyhood Hobby to an International Reputation as a Designer of Ocean Greyhounds.

THE Cappadocia, newest and swiftest of ocean liners, slid smoothly off the ways. Under her own momentum she glided across the white capped surface of the bay. Two tugs that had been lying in wait puffed up to the knife-sharp bow and made fast their lines.

With an ear splitting shrieking of sirens and a swirling of waters the vessel was towed out of the channel and brought to rest close off shore. There she lay while William Francis Gibbs, the nine-year-old designer, studied her trim and the way she rode the waves set up by a passing cruiser. Then he lifted her out of the bathtub and marched off to his workshop.

Thirty Years Later
Three decades have rolled by since the launching of the Cappadocia in a bathtub which the imagination of a boy had invested with the huge berths, the towering cranes, and all the other titanic activities of a busy shipyard. For the last seven years the man who was that boy has been recognized both at home and abroad as one of the most brilliant ship designers this country has ever produced.

From playing with toy boats to international fame as a marine architect! From the family bathtub to a famous shipyard on the Atlantic Coast, where this marine architect is busy today constructing the Malolo, the largest and fastest high-powered passenger steamship ever built in the United States! They seem like long jumps. They are, too. But not so long as they seem.

Most people will tell you that it is a good thing for a boy to have a hobby. William Francis Gibbs will go further. He will tell you that he would not be supervising the construction of a great liner today but for the boyhood hobby that led to the launching of the Cappadocia.

The Boy Gibbs
Thousands and tens of thousands of American boys have built themselves toy boats and have sailed them in anything they could find, from the bathtub to the ocean. Caught by the beauty and the mystery of ships, a boy needs only his fertile imagination to people his craft with a swarming crew and staff her hold with the treasures of Cathay.

In the case of most boys, however, other things soon come to seem more interesting. Games, the movies, motor cars come to take up more and more of the time. The old delight of cruising down to Rio in a one pound brig with the trade winds whistling through her match stick rigging soon passes into the limbo of forgotten joys.

But in this respect young Gibbs differed from his fellows. Born in Philadelphia of a long line of farmers and merchants, there was no tradition of sea-faring ancestors to account for the grip ships had upon him. Yet for him ships of every kind kept throughout the years their pristine glamor and romance.

His miniature crafts were more than playthings. He studied their construction. He took them apart and put them together again. He tried always to improve their design—their speed, their seaworthiness, the beauty of their lines.

A Call for Ships
The year 1917 found America preparing to throw her mighty armies into the wild welter of war on the battlefields of France. But to transport the fighting men, the munitions and the supplies America must have ships—must build ships, for already the world's supply was taxed to the limit of its capacity.

William Francis Gibbs, growing out of boyhood, had studied at Harvard and Columbia. After that he had spent two years in special research, and in learning all that foreign shipbuilders had but served to strengthen the fascination that lay for him in the sturdy ships that ride the deep sea surges of the oceans of the world.

The First Great Success
So it was that in the Spring of 1917, young Gibbs stood beside the expert mental tank of the Navy department, intently watching a model of his own design as he had watched the Cappadocia when a nine-year-old boy.

But this time the designer did not stand alone. Beside him were ranged the men who were to select the design for a standard type of vessel to carry troops and supplies to the war zone.

Seven other models embodying the designs of other marine architects had floated in that tank before him; but the delicate instruments that measured speed, wind resistance and a mass of other technical detail showed that his model surpassed them all. When the design for the large standardized troop ships was adopted seven of the eleven essential points of design were by William Francis Gibbs.

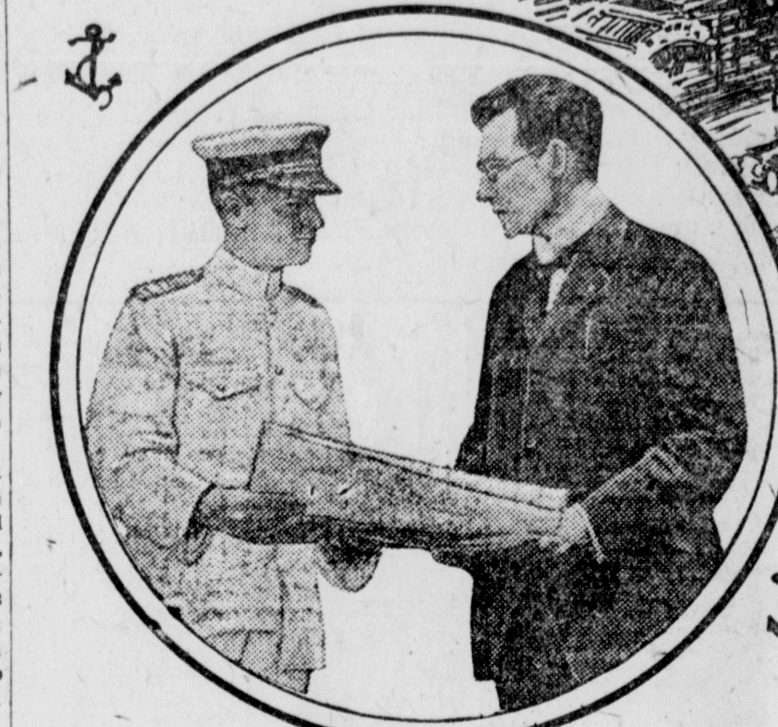

Few men have made so swift a gallop to success. But then few men have ridden their hobbies so long and hard, or with so much singleness of purpose.

Doing the Impossible
The scene shifts to the days after the war and the Leviathan lying useless at her docks. The Germans had refused to sell the government or anyone else her plans except under preposterous terms. Without plans she could not be reconducted.

"All right," said Gibbs, "I'll make a new set of plans."

The Germans laughed. So did other marine architects and engineers. It couldn't be done.

But Gibbs did it. With his staff he went over the Leviathan inch by inch; not figuratively, but literally. Every rivet hole was measured. Every pipe and electric conduit was surveyed. Every frame, brace and stress was plotted and charted in whole shipping world. But the shipping world was in for a still greater shock: On her trial trip, after the reconducting, the Leviathan made a speed of over two knots per hour above anything she had ever developed before. The young American had beaten the Germans at their own game.

For American Ships
It is only natural that a man who has loved ships so long and so well should dream of and work for the return of the days when the American flag was seen in every port and was swept in surging circles around the world.

"I am for American ships and a great American merchant navy," says Gibbs, "not only as a matter of pride, but because any nation with a coast line as long as ours is by nature a maritime nation. We have fallen from our national estate only because of the high pressure of a pioneer westward movement into the interior that has now virtually ceased.

"Today the cities of the west are industrial centers. The vast and once trackless prairies have become waving fields of grain that Europe looks to as one of the chief sources of its food supply. We have become a nation of manufacturers, agriculturalists, and exporters; and we should develop a system of ocean transportation to parallel our railroad system which is the greatest in the world.

"But, material considerations aside, ships are our birthright. Our history proves it. And even though the inland empire has been conquered by the onward march of civilization, there still remains an ocean empire ready to yield honor and more tangible rewards to American shipowners and the men who man the ships."

The Malolo
At the present time it is through

BIGGER and faster than any high-powered passenger steamship ever built in the United States, the Malolo's smokestacks would top a fourteen story building, while her three huge anchors, weighing twenty-three tons apiece, would be six stories above the pavement.

If she were set down with her bow at the corner of Fifth and Broadway, the Malolo's stern would rest well beyond the corner of Broadway and Fifty-second street. Her great breadth of beam would leave but six feet on either side between her and the building line.

The huge vessel's electric lighting plant is to be equivalent to that of a town of 6,000 people. Her pumping system will equal the water works of a city of nearly two million.

the construction of the Malolo that William Francis Gibbs is doing his part to restore to his country her lost heritage of the sea.

When the Malolo is put into service on the San Francisco-Honolulu run in the spring of 1927 she will be something even more than the largest and fastest high powered passenger steamship ever built on this side of the Atlantic. She will be a tangible proof that American yards can turn out ships the equal of those built anywhere in the world.

Hurling her 22,000 tons of steel through the long blue rollers of the tropic ocean at 25 miles an hour, this splendid monster will make the round trip between San Francisco and Honolulu in eight days—four days less than the fastest vessel now on the run.

The 600 passengers—all first class—will live in surroundings that will rival the luxury of the most famous of metropolitan hotels. A ballroom, a library, a gymnasium, a swimming pool—everything will be there that can add to the comfort of the voyage. On the whole broad bosom of the Pacific there will be no passenger vessel that can stand beside the product of an American designer and an American shipyard.

The design and construction of the Malolo is the latest episode in the brilliant career of a man who is still under forty. The most productive years of his life lie ahead of William Francis Gibbs. But no matter what heights he may reach, underneath his niche in the Hall of Fame should stand the words, "A Hobby Carried Him Here."

BAR ASSOCIATION RESPECTS MEMORY OF DEAD ATTORNEY

The following resolution was adopted by the Greene County Bar Association respecting the memory of C. L. Bogle, Yellow Springs attorney, who passed away October 29.

"Mr. Bogle was a good lawyer and was successful in practice in New York City. He was an interesting man to converse with, his experience in New York City and several trips to Europe, furnishing him with an interesting experience. While of a retiring disposition, yet, on acquaintance, Mr. Bogle was a very congenial, companionable man.

"Resolved that The Greene County Bar has lost a good and able member, and a good companion, the village of Yellow Springs a good citizen, and his widow a kind and loving husband."

The resolution, filed in Common Pleas Court, is signed by Attorneys H. L. Smith, Marcus Shoup and W. L. Miller.

REPORTS HEARD BY RED CROSS BOARD

Reports from various committees and the discussion of the annual Roll Call were the main items considered at the monthly meeting of the executive committee, Greene County Red Cross, Tuesday afternoon, after the resignation of Mrs. Sara H. Roberson, secretary, had been presented and decided upon.

The Rev. W. H. Tilford, chairman, who recently attended the national convention in St. Louis, presented his report with conditions as found in Xenia and Greene County, commenting on the connecting link between a local chapter and the national organization.

He showed how the local unit functions in disaster and how it becomes a vital part of the national and international program of beneficence throughout the world.

HE FINED HIMSELF!

Akron, O., Nov. 4.—This actually happened. Charles Esselburn was out driving when he unconsciously ran past a boulevard stop. When he returned home, he wrote out a check for $5.00 and sent it to police headquarters.

The check was received today. It was his first offense, so after deducting the costs, the remainder was turned over to the police pension.

To Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to make. Saves about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pine in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup.

Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good, and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

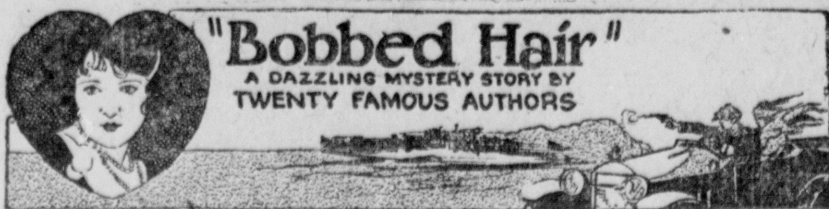

Pine is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pine" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pine Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A DAZZLING MYSTERY STORY BY TWENTY FAMOUS AUTHORS

SYNOPSIS

By midnight Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement to one of two suitors or be disinherited by Aunt Celimena. Instead she is now speeding through Greenwich, miles from home, at the side of young David Lacy of New York, whom she didn't know but whom she hailed as he was passing aunties. And now a traffic cop has halted them and threatened to arrest them for speeding. And Connie, garbed as a nun, is pleading for mercy. At Aunt Celimena's home, miles back in Connecticut, excitement runs high.

In the reflected glow the face of the policeman altered its expression slowly. It ran from anger, through surprise to bewilderment. Still Lacy could not see her face, yet from the effect upon the policeman he understood that it was no ordinary face. An ordinary face couldn't possibly have had such an effect.

"It's not a mask I'm wearing." Again she was interrupted, this time by a sneeze so violent and so realistic that Lacy was tempted to slap her forehead in the middle of the back. "It's not a mask I'm wearing," and again a sneeze. "It's a thing—a sort of thing to keep out the dust. I suffer so from hay fever."

The cop yielded but he was cynical. "Well, it sounds fishy to me, but I guess it's all right. But look out for Hogan at the Portchester line. He won't let you off so easy."

Lacy started the motor, and when he turned again, the face of his companion was once more hidden by the mask. She was sneezing, delicately this time, with just the proper effect. The car moved off.

Miss Celimena was staring at the big grandfather clock.

leaving behind it in the shadow the policeman whose face made so good and yet so tantalizing a mirror.

"Where is this sick aunt?" growled Lacy.

There was a faint laugh. "Why, she's the one I'm running away from."

"We can't go on like this," he continued in the same gruff voice, "being stopped at every cross road. One of these cops will arrest me for abduction." At that moment they passed the tower of Pickwick Inn, and Lacy, noticing the clock, said, "It's ten minutes to eleven. We can just make the last ferry."

We'll turn off here and go over to Long Island. I've a house not far from Glen Cove. You can change into some other clothes."

Before his companion was able to protest, the big car swung around the corner, turned into the main street, and swept with a catlike, insinuating purr beneath the railway bridge.

In the little harbor the tide was low, and the muggy, miasmic smell of the bare mud hung over everything. Somehow it was an ominous smell, hinting of strande ships, of pirates, of wild adventure. . . .

The smell of salt marshes at low tide, of rotting ships. Through the gathering mists the tall masts of the fishing boats stood against the dull gray blue of the sky like black pencils.

The car drove down, down, down along the cobblestone streets, until at length it turned into the ferry way. At the end stood the waiting boat, its gateway yawning black as the mouth of a sea monster. When at last Lacy turned to regard his companion, he found that she had gathered about her the blanket that lay in the back of the car. She was hidden now all save the beautiful shapely head with the hair so tightly concealed, and the eyes so bright now with a sense of mystery and adventure. She still wore the mask. Lacy regarded her and thought to himself, "No, there has never been anything like this. And to happen in Connecticut of all places!"

To the grizzled gatekeeper Lacy muttered, "How long before you start?"

"Five minutes," the fellow replied. Somehow Lacy felt nearer suddenly to this strange woman beside him. Perhaps it was the sense of their being bound together by the same peril, the same adventure.

From the depths of the ferry house he heard the grizzled gatekeeper spit suddenly and exclaim, "It's a great night for bootleggers. I reckon this fog'll thicken up steadily till morning." And then the same voice lifted to shout to the pile, high up on the ferry deck, "Don't be running any of 'em down tonight, Sam. Can't afford to waste good liquor on fishes."

Sister Connemara laughed softly. "If you knew from what you had saved me—"

It is impossible to know what sort of picture Lacy had of the world from which she had escaped. It must have been a strange one, and certainly it was different from the picture in the mind of his companion. She saw a ballroom filled with excited people, two lovers hunting desperately among the syringas and perennial borders, and through it all Aunt Celimena moving about, angry and composed, in a black ball gown trimmed in 1880 jet.

"I say," said his companion presently in a puzzled voice, "haven't we met somewhere—before you entered a nunnery?"

CHAPTER IV

Zeno Janis
By Elsie Janis

In the two hours following that brief, altogether unsatisfactory talk with her niece, Miss Celimena was guilty of forgetting several times the rigid code of hospitality in which she had been trained and staring openly and anxiously at the painted face of the big grandfather clock in the hall.

If she could have done it without being seen, it is not at all certain she would not also have gone so far as to push the hands forward, to lessen the sheer nervous torture of those dragging minutes until midnight.

This latest escapade of Connemara's was not only utter foolishness, but it made the girl and Miss Celimena herself seem undignified. It was unthinkable that a Moore of Morelands should resort to such cheap buffoonery for the announcing of her engagement—which ought, properly, to be a serious, not to say ceremonious occasion. Thus, over and over, back and forth in the same track, like frightened and feebly indignant mice, ran the thoughts of Miss Celimena.

And even oftener than she studied the clock, this much-harassed lady studied the faces of the two other people most concerned in Connemara's outrageous behavior.

It was easy to see that Salton-stall Adams had little liking for the sudden blaze of limelight in which he found himself. Salt, like Miss Celimena, had been brought up to see dignity weigh much more heavily in the scales than romance. Or perhaps his definition of what constituted romance differed from spoiled young Connemara's. At any rate, as any and everyone could see, he looked very stiff and disapproving indeed as he danced, correctly and dutifully, with one after another of Connemara's guests, gallantly trying to live up to what was expected of him, but—as only the discerning noticed—with a faintly wistful bewilderment underlying the disapproval, as if his rather slow brain had not entirely caught up with the meaning of what was happening to him.

Bingham Carrington, on the contrary, was carrying the awkward situation off with a high hand. Inwardly he resented it, if possible, even more bitterly than his rival, for Bingham was an emotional youngster and very genuinely in love. But he held his handsome blond head well back, with his chin lifted a half inch or so more than usual, and had a drawn come-back for every inuendo of the over-curious.

SUMMER'S FLAVOR IN WINTER FOOD "E" BRAND SWEET CORN

Tender, luscious, fresh-flavored sweet corn, served in various ways will add appetizing variety to winter menus. "E" BRAND SWEET CORN tastes like corn just from the cob. This is because of the especial care taken in the selection and canning of the corn. Corn grown in rich river bottom soil is used. It is carefully sorted and all ears that are imperfect or hard are rejected. After the sorting, every ear is THOROUGHLY WASHED. The remainder of the process is done by machinery and no hands touch the corn until it is opened in your kitchen. The entire process is immaculately clean and careful. An extra amount of sugar used in the canning gives it a delicious flavor.
